CAPTAINS WITHOUT EYES: Intelligence Failures in World War II. Lyman B. Kirkpatrick, Jr. Macmillan, $6.95
Author of "The Real CIA" and an intelligence officer with the U. S. Army in Europe during the Second World War, Kirkpatrick writes with authority if without special lustre of five major battles in which intelligence failures were major contributors to defeat or disaster. Most impressively, because he includes lengthy quotations from the broken-code messages of Japanese agents plus the evaluations of our own intelligence people, he describes how and why catastrophe struck Pearl Harbor on December 7, 1941. Kirkpatrick also gives clear, straightforward accounts of Barbarossa, the code name for the German attack on Russia in June of 1941; the Dieppe raid, August, 1942; the British air-drop on Arnhem, September, 1944; and the Battle of the Bulge in December of 1944.
